EDNA HAS NO DIAMONDS TO GIVE TO HER ADMIRERS. Mother Denies That Valuable Pin Was Presented Sunday Night. "The man who claims my daughter gave him a diamond pin at the station when she left for New York Sunday evening 'kissed' the story," said Mrs. Edgar C. Pettie, mother of Edna May, yesterday. "Edna did not give him or anybody else a diamond pin. She is not such a silly girl as to be handing out diamonds or any other jewels to every man who opens a door for her. I never left her one minute while at the station Sunday night and nothing of the kind occurred. Whenever 'tips' or rewards are given, Miss May's maid, Perry, attends to it. "Three years ago upon Edna's visit here there was a story that she rewarded a young physician who attended her, by giving him a diamond ring. Nothing of the kind happened. She has too many members of her own family to present with diamonds when she has more than she knows what to do with."

VALUABLE RING FOUND. Mrs. A. J. Feek Missed It After the Edna May Dinner. A valuable solitaire diamond ring which Mrs. A. J. Feek lost last Thursday has been found. The evening of the dinner given to her niece, Edna May, at the Yates, Mrs. Feek wore all of her rings, as she supposed. While at dinner she drew off her gloves and something fell to the floor. Examination failed to record anything, and the ring was not missed until next day. Mrs. Feek searched the house without result and then reported her loss to the police. Upon returning home she found the ring lying in the center of her dressing table. W. C. A. to Meet. Stocks and Jellies Will Be Included in Woman's Work

New Exchange, Located in Union Building, Formally Opened Next Month.

On September 1 the Womens Exchange in connection with the Womens Union will be formally opened and will, it is expected, fill a long felt want. Mrs. Helen M. Rice has been engaged by the union to have full charge of the exchange and will open up the rooms on that date. Already the large front room in the temporary headquarters of the union opposite the Union Building looks quite shipshape. A show case in the front part holds some samples of exquisite hand-painted china and bric-a-brac, while in the rear of the room is a large case devoted to stocks, embroidered linens, fancy work, hand-painted shirt waist sets and decorated articles for toilet use. Other large cases are also in place that will be used to hold cakes, bread and all kinds of baked stuffs and pastry. There will also be jellies, preserves and canned fruit of all varieties and orders will be taken for puddings, pies, bake stuffs and fancy dishes. Aside from the many articles on sale orders will be taken for fancy work, plain sewing and embroidery. It is the intention of the managers of the union to make the exchange as broad as possible. From helping the individual who takes her goods to the exchange for sale, the patrons of it will feel that they are helping the worthy charity that is managing it. In Buffalo and many other large cities the exchanges are conducted on a large scale and are wonderfully successful, the Buffalo exchange being run by the Womens Union of that city. In New York city some of the exchanges are run on such a scale as to include all kinds of dressmaking and women's and children's outfitting, while anything for the table, from soup to dessert, can be secured at them. The union management wishes all inquiries to be sent to Mrs. Helen M. Rice, Fayetteville, between now and September 1, and after that to Mrs. Rice at the Womens Union.

ELOPED SECOND TIME.

Noted New York Beauty and Dentist Depart for West. Miss Adelaide Schell and Dr. Francis Alexis Sutorius of New York have, it is alleged, eloped for the second time. The doctor, who is suing for divorce, and is at present under bonds to pay alimony, disappeared from his home a few days ago, and Miss Schell, taking advantage of the absence of her parents in the Adirondacks, packed her belongings at the same time and disappeared, leaving a note that she was going to California to visit relatives. Her father, however, said that there was not the slightest doubt in his mind that she had run away again, and he said that as she was of legal age as far as he was concerned she could go as far as she pleased.

Her father, however, said that there was not the slightest doubt in his mind that she had run away again, and he said that as she was of legal age as far as he was concerned she could go as far as she pleased. After his return from Europe, where he and Miss Schell went four years ago and returned only when starving, Dr. Sutorius built up a large practice in the Bronx. Despite the pleadings of his wife he continued to be seen in the company of Miss Schell, who is said to be a beautiful woman, possessing a fine singing voice.

SERVANT PROBLEM SOLVED.

Madison, Wis., families employing servants have long sought to extend the liberties and privileges of the girls, giving them the use of all or a large portion of the house at stated intervals for the entertaining of their friends, encouraging them in church and charity work, and in other ways broadening and elevating their position in life. Prof. F. C. Sharp, one of the leading members of the Wisconsin University faculty, turned over his large house to his servants recently and they entertained their friends with a dancing party.

Dyke-Wilkinson. At the home of the bride's uncle, R. DeWitt Mann, on Saturday occurred the marriage of Miss Adela E. Wilkinson and Carl A. Dyke. Rev. Dr. A. J. Absel performed the ceremony. After September 1 Mrs. and Mr. Dyke will be at home at No. 109 Aumont street. Chatman-Lowry. Miss Minnie Lowry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lowry of Canajoharie and David Chatman of Syracuse were married Sunday afternoon by the Rev. J. D. Peters at his home on Cliff street. Their future home will be in this city. Bishop Ludden Officiated. Rt. Rev. Bishop P. A. Ludden laid the cornerstone of the new Sacred Catholic Church at Brighton on Sunday. The Bishop complimented the Sisters on their good work and urged them to be as good citizens as they were Catholics.

Emerick Reunion, Held Next Week, an Interesting Event

Family Tree an Old One. One Settled Here a Century Ago.

At Long Branch, August 20, there will be held the reunion of the Emerick family, one of the oldest in Onondaga county. Adam Emerick took up a tract of land on the present site west of Baldwinsville in 1501. The ancestor, Mathew Emerick, came from Holland early in the eighteenth century, settling in Claverack, on the Hudson. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War and died at Claverack in 1822 at the age of 81 years. Adam, his son, was born November 10, 1749, and in 1804 made his first visit to Onondaga county. He bought a military tract of 800 acres two miles west of Baldwinsville, on the north side of the Seneca river. The following year he returned to Claverack, coming back to Onondaga county with his family in 1806. Since that time the land chosen by Adam for his home has been constantly in the Emerick family. He was the father of ten children and died in 1820. Those representing this family in this city are: Mr. and Mrs. W. Arthur Emerick, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hill, Mrs. Frances Emerick and her little son Arthur, James B. Emerick, Arthur Warner and Miss Roberta Hill.

Walk Indicates Character

"Ever notice a woman's walk? No? Well, just stand on the corner and watch 'em for awhile. It's worth getting sunburned. "Now just for a flyer, I'll gamble that girl has a pair of shoes on that are two sizes too small. Look at the way she puts her foot down. Looks as if she was walking on tacks, don't she? Well you can gamble on it every time you see a girl walk like that it's tight shoes. And it affects her expression as well as her walk; did you notice the agonized look? Well, that's what I term 'tight shoe face.' "Sure thing, you needn't laugh. There's the golf face, that's well known. A man, or woman either, can't drive a ball and wear a placid countenance. It's against all rules of the game as well as a physical impossibility. Then there's the picture hat face. There's a strained expression about it, denoting that all the wearer's faith in a kind providence is pinned with the same six pins used to hold on her headgear. Well, the tight shoe face is just as distinctive and is a combination of physical suffering and a moral courage. "Take that woman crossing the street, conscious of the looked and palpably self-conscious girl? Well, she's got on a new dress, something pretty smart according to her way of thinking; in fact she's so crossed up she can hardly walk. See that twist, isn't it a wonder? She might just as well have a sign out. I've got on my best clothes." "Now there's a girl coming right there that wears shoes big enough to comfortably accommodate her feet and one who knows that diamonds and white socks don't go walking at the same time. Ton to one she plays golf or drives a golf cart, and used to outdoor exercise anyway and is not weighed down by her own importance. "But my word there's a woman that any man with regard for his peace of mind wants to steer clear of. I can tell you why? Well, just look at that little, jerky, short step. Temper, my boy, temper, and narrow-mindedness rolled into one. An ordinary mortal takes a step commensurate with her height; a tall woman will cover about six inches and a short one about three. But that one does not put her foot in advance an inch beyond her other toe. One foot catches up with the other, so to speak, and although you see she covers the ground rapidly, she always has that queer little short-breathed, minging way. "What? Does such a clothes or golf have anything to do with the leisurely walk and the peevish smile on the woman that just passed? No, that's chronic, good teeth and resignation!"

How to Serve Green Peppers in Several Relished Ways

It is not many years ago that the use of the green pepper in the kitchen was restricted to late summer and early fall pickle making. But the influence of the foreign chef, which has revolutionized American cookery, has made this long neglected vegetable one of the most generally useful of all the market supplies. Uncooked, the sweet green pepper adds a refreshing flavor to salads and cold soups. It also serves as an appetizing relish among the hors d'oeuvres and as a garnish. Cooked, it gives zest to soups, stews, ragouts and a host of made dishes, besides serving an excellent purpose as a vegetable by itself. Before using the pepper, it should always be denuded of its seeds and of the surrounding white pulp. These are the peppery parts. As a Relish. To serve green peppers as a relish, wash them, remove the seeds and white pulp them, and cut them in lengthwise strips. Serve them in a small relish dish. The pieces then are eaten with salt after the manner of olives. They are an excellent accompaniment to fish, game or hearty meats. For the vegetable salad, prepare the peppers as described, cut them in small pieces and mix them with the other ingredients, and mix them with the other ingredients. For cold slaw, shred or dice the peppers and mix them with the cabbage. For Salads. The green peppers may be cut in two, lengthwise, making a cup-shaped receptacle, and serve as a basis for chicken or veal salad or for vegetable mixtures. To veal salad or for vegetable mixtures. To veal salad or for vegetable mixtures. To veal salad or for vegetable mixtures. Luncheon Tidbits. A cupful of cold chicken, seasoned with a few spoonfuls of cold boiled ham, makes a delicious filling for stuffed peppers. There may be a mixture of crumbs. Season with butter, salt and pepper. Another filling for baked peppers blends boiled rice and tomatoes seasoned with salt and paprika and a trace of onion juice. Better than the onion juice, however, is a clove of garlic bruised until not a vestige of pulp remains. An acceptable luncheon dish combines green peppers, rice and cheese. Season hot boiled rice with melted butter, Parmesan cheese and salt and paprika. For a plant of the boiled rice use a quarter of a cupful of grated cheese and a heaping tablespoonful of butter melted. Fill into pepper shells and bake covered for ten or fifteen minutes. Then brown on the top and serve hot. Left-Overs. Left-overs highly seasoned and mixed with bread crumbs may be used for a filling for stuffed green peppers. Grind fine any cold meat that the house affords, mix with it moist bread crumbs, add a slice each of finely ground boiled ham and tongue, season with onion juice, salt and

Orchid or Irish Iris Are Correct Flowers for Bridal Bouquet

Former as Reasonable as Commoner Blossoms Favored by Brides.

"Irish Iris is a new flower that florists say will succeed the gerardia in popularity," says a report from New York. "It is white and is like a vine orchid in its shape. For table decoration the Irish Iris is charming and women are wearing them in their hair. At the most recent dinner of Mrs. Pembroke Jones Iris was the chief decoration. It was arranged in a large flat bowl with a background of asparagus plants." A tour of the leading florists in this city reveals the fact that Irish Iris has not reached Syracuse. "We have not heard of it," they say. "But New York patrons will patronize any new blossoms, whatever the price, while up here roses and carnations are the favorites. "There was a time when orchids were away and beyond any, but the millionaire's purse, and the idea has become so firmly rooted into the modest-purged folk that these are expensive blossoms that one rarely hears outside of the large cities like New York or Chicago of a bride's bouquet being composed of orchids. "The woman does not dare to suggest it when consulted and the man is afraid to approach the subject. "As a matter of fact an orchid bouquet can be gotten up as cheaply as a valley Lily, swansonia or hysanthus. I can produce one for $15, and that is my price for any bridal bouquet. Orchids sell for $5 a dozen or 50 cents apiece. And here we are getting a dollar apiece for American beauties. "Valley lilies, roses and carnations have been done to death by brides. And it will go down in the floral history of this city for the first bride who breaks the 'begot' on orchid bouquets. If this Irish Iris becomes the fashion in New York orchids may become still cheaper. But they will never become a common flower, for they are too delicate to sell on the streets as do the rose, violet or valley lily. "One can hardly imagine a more beautiful floral emblem for a wedding than a white orchid with a delicate yellow center, and it is hoped that with its acceptance the shower bouquet will have been superseded by something less common when the first Syracuse bride carries it," said a society leader of this city when approached on this subject.

JAPANESE HONOR AMERICANS Dr. Anita N. Magee Writes of Her Work at Seat of War. A letter from Dr. Anita Newcomb Magee has been received by Mrs. Isabella Alexander, president of the National Auxiliary of United Spanish War Veterans in Cleveland, O. Mrs. Magee took the first body of nurses to the seat of the Russo-Japanese War, and she is personally known in this city. Dr. Magee says: "I wish I had time to write of our work in this hospital and on the hospital ships, which is most interesting. I just returned from an inspection of the hospital where the wounded Russian prisoners are and found them receiving the same attention and treatment that the Japanese give their own wounded. I have great respect for the high principles which actuate the Japanese in their lives and in the conduct of this war. For example, a wounded officer while on the hospital ship sent a note to our nurse who was on board asking her to give her best care to the one wounded Russian who was on board. "I am the superintendent of nurses here and I go in a few days to visit the hospital on the Yalu river. All sick and wounded are brought to Hiroshima as promptly as possible, and all the surgery, except the emergency work, is done here. "The Japanese are so good as to praise the work of my party of former army nurses highly, and they have shown us every imaginable honor and kindness, so greatly do they appreciate the fact of our American women coming to Japan to nurse their soldiers. "So our respect for the time when we must leave them is coming all too soon, as we should all like to do much more for them. Miss Susan B. Anthony Returns. Miss Susan B. Anthony arrived in New York yesterday from London on the steamer Minnetonka. Prominent Woman Will Speak. Mrs. Kate E.
